Ocean Cargo Inc is a freight forwarding company, and we are not liable for any charges if your container is stopped by the US Customs for random, routine procedural checks.

On our end, we will always make sure to have all the necessary paperwork attached when we ship your container and take the correct steps to meet all requirements. However, due to US Customs policy, they can always stop a container for random inspections. Although we will try our best to help you with anything we can, we are not responsible for this stop or any fees related to it because they are a completely separate entity from us. You will be liable to US Customs and all charges pertaining to this stop will be covered by you and paid directly to them.
